The heart of Living in God's Economy is a three-step process:

1. Find the excess;

2. Choose a simpler way; and

3. Share with others.

Find, choose, share—

simple acts that reveal to the world the prophetic power of Christ-

centered family life.

Living in God's Economy—the family workbook

A powerful resource for your domestic church, Living in God's Economy blends a simply-written theology of the prophetic witness of Christ-centered family life with well-paced and engaging activities for family members of all ages. Since the workbook's introduction in 2000, Moore has fine-tuned, expanded, and deepened the content to reflect the urgency of our current economic times and what our Christ-centered household response offers our collective future.

While the tone of each workbook session is designed for adults, teens, and children old enough to participate, the "Food for Thought" portion at the start of each session goes a little deeper into the issues covered in the session. These essays can also stand on their own, providing material for parish-based small faith-sharing or social action groups or personal spiritual enrichment.

Further, the "Food for Thought" essays can stimulate ideas for classroom teaching, workshops, parish retreats, and homilies.

About the author . . .

MARY SHARON MOORE, a seasoned writer, retreat and workshop facilitator, and vocational and spiritual director, is dedicated to awakening others to God's calling. Her ministry flows from her belief that all Christian men and women, young adults and youth are called to live, as Jesus did, generously, imaginatively, and lovingly for the sake of the world. Living in God's Economy makes that calling easier for households ready to respond.

Mary Sharon believes that each of us has been anointed for a purpose and for a work of meaning and generosity in this world. Mary Sharon is founding director of AWAKENING VOCATIONS, which delivers honest talk and practical guidance on the nature of God's calling.
